

The only freedoms that a concentration of media power allows, is the freedom of mega-corporations to limit the freedoms of other media to compete in a fair and democratic faction.

As anti-trust laws in the past have sought to limit corporations from becoming a totalitarian dominance in this county, over-reaching the democratic intents of the Constitution so should controls be put on the media; an outlet whose intent ought to be a fair, unbiased, untouched by money or politics, recount of events.

Sincerely,

Joseph Rath
